If a group places political signs in the community, the group must form a political committee if they take in or expend over $500 in a calendar year and support or oppose a candidate or issue and the proper disclaimer must be placed on the signs. If there is no disclaimer, a complaint can be filed with the Florida Elections Commission.

An individual can make unlimited independent expenditures without filing as a political committee, but must file reports if they spend over $5,000 and must include a disclaimer. FS 106.011(12)(a.)

The Supervisor of Elections authority over political signage ends at the 150' no solicitation zone which is located at the entrance to any precinct, early voting site or the elections office where vote by mail ballots are requested and printed. FS 102.031(4)(a)

If a group or individual is placing signs in the community, they may or may not be required to have a disclaimer depending on their purpose, their limitations and restrictions under statute.

Size and placement (rights-of-way) of campaign signs are under state, county or city code enforcement jurisdiction.
